PUBLIC ART IN DOWNTOWN BELLEVUE

Bellevue's downtown showcases nearly 130 works of public art available for anyone to enjoy. This is the map that will help you find every single one.

With exceptionally strong retail, new high-rises, 40,000 jobs and 10,000 residents, Downtown Bellevue is a lively place. Public art is woven into nearly every activity a person can do in Downtown Bellevue, from walking in the park, to going to work; shopping, dining and attending a conference or an everyday meeting with colleagues; seeing a play, waiting for a bus, checking out a book, even getting a permit at City Hall; look around and you're likely to see a work of public art.

WHY?

The City of Bellevue has an active public art program, but only 20% of these works come from the City. Other public agencies like the King County Library System, Metro and Sound Transit contribute. But the largest portion of public art in Downtown Bellevue comes from our Downtown developers, businesses and property owners. Public Art enhances property values and portrays us as we see ourselves – engaged in our community on many levels. It promotes a sense of wonder, curiosity, imagination and pleasure. Our public art reflects the diversity and creativity that makes Bellevue the unique, dynamic and successful city it is today.

How to Use This Guide

Downtown Bellevue is roughly 1 square mile, laid out on a grid pattern and easy to navigate. As a result, art walks nearly organize themselves. Just pick a starting point and this guide will show you where all the art is nearby. Pick your direction and set off on your art explorations. Here's a tip: with so many privately and publicly-owned collections it's not unusual for many art works to be clustered in one location. This map makes it easy to spot these art clusters in two ways. On the map art work numbers are shown as a range, e.g., 12-31. On the listing, those art works are visually tied together with a color box. For example, the five permanent works in the Downtown Park (Works 1-5) are listed with a light grey box in the background. We hope you enjoy Downtown Bellevue's public art, an amazing public resource that is strongly supported by the City, businesses and residents of Bellevue.

About the Bellevue Arts Commission & Arts Program

The Bellevue Arts Commission advises City Council on how the City should invest in the arts as well as on arts issues in the community. It guides implementing the Cultural Compass, Bellevue's plan for developing arts and culture in our community. The Arts Commission also advises the City's Arts Program. Seven Bellevue residents appointed by City Council volunteer as Arts Commissioners. Bellevue's Arts Program administers city programs funding artists and arts organizations serving Bellevue, public art, cultural policy development and implementation, and other cultural development activities.
