The lower flood insurance rate map (FIRM) data for the King County, Washington area includes several key features. The map highlights areas subject to flood risk, with zones marked as "Floodway Areas in Zone A" and "Floodway Areas in Zone AE." The legend on the right side of the map explains these designations, with "Floodway Areas in Zone A" referring to areas subject to a one-year flood with a 1% chance of flooding, and "Floodway Areas in Zone AE" referring to areas subject to a one-year flood with a 0.2% chance of flooding.

The map also includes a section titled "Questions about this map," which provides contact information for the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). This section encourages individuals to contact FEMA for further information or assistance with flood-related questions.

The map also contains a "Notes to Users" section, which advises on the proper use and interpretation of the data. It emphasizes the importance of understanding the map's legend and the criteria for floodway and flood zone designations.

Overall, the map serves as a valuable resource for understanding flood risk in King County, Washington, and is designed to help residents and businesses make informed decisions regarding flood protection and insurance.